Three famous Italians from the worlds of food, TV and dance helped to celebrate the launch of The Italian Job in HD by attending the world premiere at London's Soho Hotel yesterday. Chef Antonio Carluccio posed in front of the classic Minis with Laura Esposito, presenter of Five's Football Italiano, and Strictly Come Dancing judge Bruno Tonioli, who was most recently seen on American TV screens in Dance War.

The classic film has been remastered by Sky as part of their Michael Caine Season to celebrate his 75th birthday on 14 March, and marks the beginning of the channel's restoration of classic British films in to high definition. The man himself Michael Caine, whom I didn't spot at the premiere, said: "I love HD ... of course, it's very unforgiving, especially on young beautiful ladies, but thank God I'm old, I don't care".

Other celebs who turned up to the premiere were actor Stephen Tompkinson, radio DJ Toby Anstis, and Daisy Lowe who came with her boyfriend Will Cameron Jr from Blondelle. To see extra photos of all the stars just read more
